

Transportation SHSM

Transportation affects our lives in a multitude of ways. We drive cars for everyday purposes, use mass transit to commute to work, and take flights and cruises on holidays. Transportation systems move raw materials to manufacturers and finished products to consumers – locally, nationally, and globally.

In addition to being essential to our daily lives, transportation and transportation systems are an important area of employment in our economy. Employment in this sector has grown steadily since 2000, reflecting a high demand for qualified personnel.
